Cree	Study/Course	University of Alberta—Faculty of Education, Aboriginal Teacher Education Program (ATEP) ATEP is an off-campus community-based teacher education program designed to recruit Aboriginal post-secondary students to the teaching profession. The program prepares teachers for work in diverse classrooms and focuses particularly on preparation for working with Aboriginal children. Overall, the goal is to contribute to a growing work force of Aboriginal teachers in northern communities and urban classrooms with a strong population of Aboriginal children. The University of Alberta works in partnership with First Nations and public colleges in this program. Students can complete a Bachelor of Education (BEd) degree while maintaining family, community and cultural connections. The program integrates Aboriginal world views in the courses, and program instructors and administrators seek guidance from Aboriginal Elders, educators and community members on program design and delivery. Students graduate with the same BEd degree as their on-campus counterparts in the elementary (K–6) stream, with minors in teaching Cree language and culture, cross-cultural literacy and language arts.	Financial assistance possible	Aboriginal Teacher Education Program (ATEP) Faculty of Education University of Alberta 845 Education South Edmonton, AB T6G 2G5 Telephone: 780–492–3187 Fax: 780–492–2461 http://www.uofaweb.ualberta.ca/education/ATEP.cfm http://www.education.ualberta.ca http://www.atep.ualberta.ca/index.html

	NEW	The program does not have a home college but moves to areas of northern and central Alberta when a partnership college is ready to host the program. The Faculty of Education plans delivery in partnership with colleges, when a group or cohort of students complete the required credits and are ready for entry into the third year of the BEd program. To date, there have been four degree completion programs (the last two years of the BEd)—one at Blue Quills First Nations College, two at Northern Lakes College, and one at Maskwachees Cultural College in Hobbema. Blue Quills First Nations College is currently hosting ATEP, the degree completion program (the final two years of the BEd). This cohort completed their program in April 2009. Pending interest and enrollment, a new cohort will begin at Yellowhead Tribal College in September 2009. And again, pending interest and enrollment, for the first time, an urban cohort will begin at the University of Alberta campus in September 2009. In 2010, a new cohort will begin at Portage College, and in 2011, another cohort will begin again at Northern Lakes College.
